

Crowdfunding Biotech Forum

An Emerging Vehicle for Funding Emerging Companies

Wednesday, October 23, 2013 | 5:00 p.m. Registration | 5:30 p.m. Program Begins
North Carolina Biotechnology Center | 15 T.W. Alexander Drive | RTP, NC

The greatest challenge for emerging life science companies is typically access to funding. With federal rules that took effect in September, companies may now solicit investments from accredited investors through the Internet and other outreach methods, from television spots to billboards. The ability to attract investors through crowdfunding creates an important new funding vehicle for emerging companies across industries. However, there are issues that management teams must understand prior to kickstarting an equity crowdfunding effort.

This Biotech Forum, organized by the North Carolina Biotechnology Center and CED, will highlight leaders from the top healthcare and agriculture equity crowdfunding groups in the nation. Learn whether and how crowdfunding can fuel the growth of your company.
